

4.6.1.1 The fun factor

Sometimes I hear surprising things from ladies. 'Yes, I never dared to ask, because I don't dance well enough...' 'I think you would much rather dance with women who can dance very well, and I am (still) only...' Or things in that style. Enough to ask myself who I actually like to dance with.

Dancing with good followers is of course easy and goes smoothly. But I actually prefer to dance with ladies who clearly enjoy it. Anyone who doesn't have that or who gives me the feeling that they don't like dancing with me, will sometimes get a 2nd and possibly 3rd chance. But then I give up. So it's really not about the level at which you dance, or the number of courses or years of experience. But for fun, enjoyment, laughter, being relaxed, dealing with mistakes and improvisation...

The fun factor is described as follows: a source of happiness through usually small, unimportant things; enjoy working together. Everything for education and entertainment. Have fun!
